

The Ohio Commission on Dispute Resolution and Conflict Management in partnership with Wilmington College Peace Resource Center and the Ohio Resource Network present:

School Conflict Management Training for Teachers

A school conflict management program helps create a school environment that fosters prevention and de-escalation of conflicts and that establishes procedures for the effective, nonviolent resolution of conflicts that occur in school settings. To be effective, a comprehensive program must address more than just student conduct. Conflict management attitudes and skills must also be an integral part of school curriculum and instruction, as well as the total school culture. This workshop will help participants to look at the many and varied components of an effective program and help them develop a plan to begin using the skills in their own school setting with a heavy focus on curriculum integration and conflict management as a classroom management tool.

Where: Wilmington College Cincinnati Branch, Blue Ash, Ohio

When: Thursday August 14th and Friday August 15th, 2008 (must attend both sessions)

Times: 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Presenters: Dr. Jim Boland, Director of Wilmington College Peace Resource Center, Professor of Education
Sonya Zumbiel, Instructor at Wilmington College, former elementary teacher

Cost: $30.00, includes a 500+ page Curriculum Guide on CD-ROM and lunch both days.

CEU's pending through the Ohio Resource Network.

Funding for this is provided by the OHIO COMMISSION ON DISPUTE RESOLUTION AND CONFLICT MANAGEMENT. Space is limited to 30 participants. Participants who are accepted for training will receive a letter of confirmation and directions to the training.
